High on a shelf sits a regiment of colored bottles. Standing formally by their side, yet somehow apart, a green bottle waits, scarred with old glue and shreds of long forgotten label. Taken off the shelf, the green slowly turns to a fog, mist, and suddenly liquid, dripping off to a pool at the feet. This pool is special, for it reflects the actions and scenery once alive, now dead and buried under the epitaph of a single high school career.

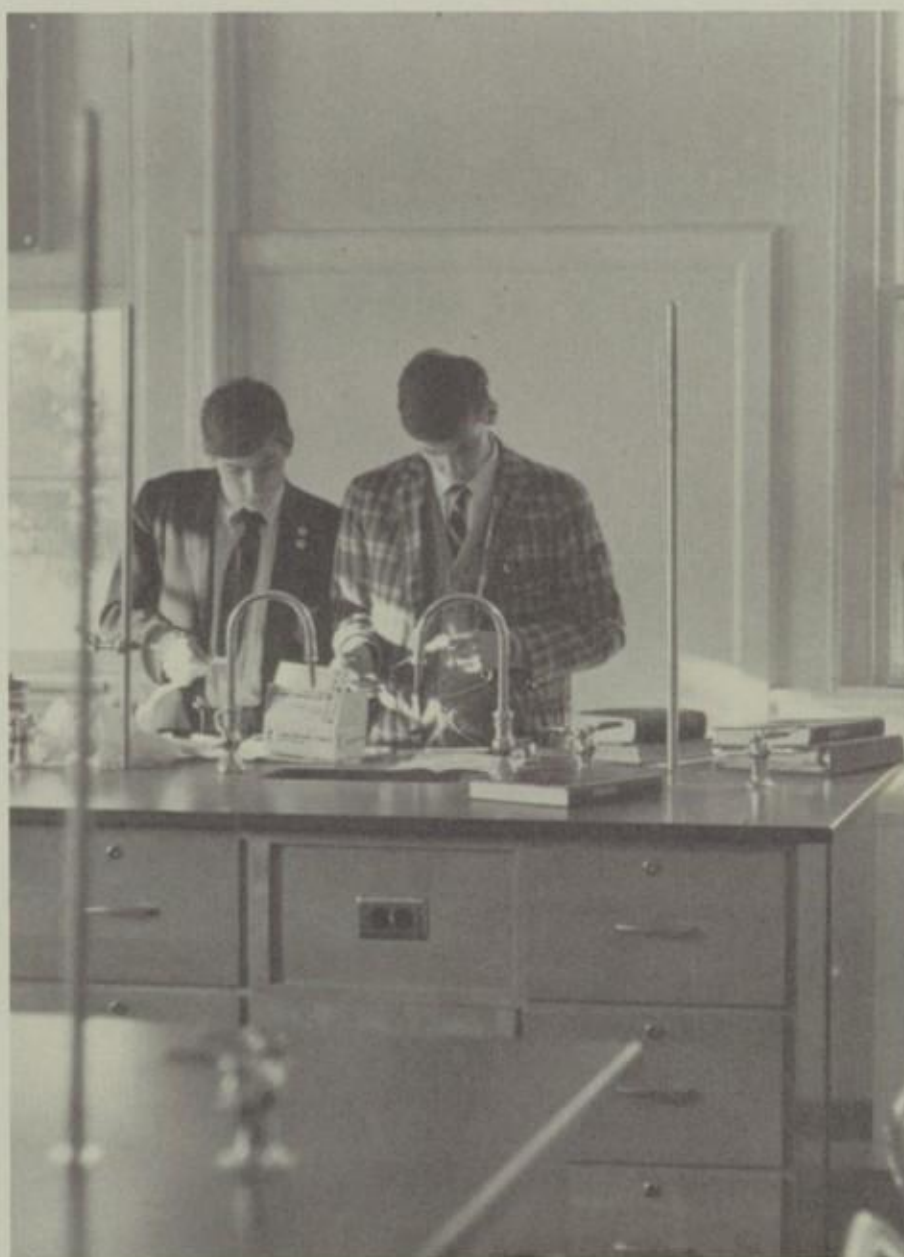

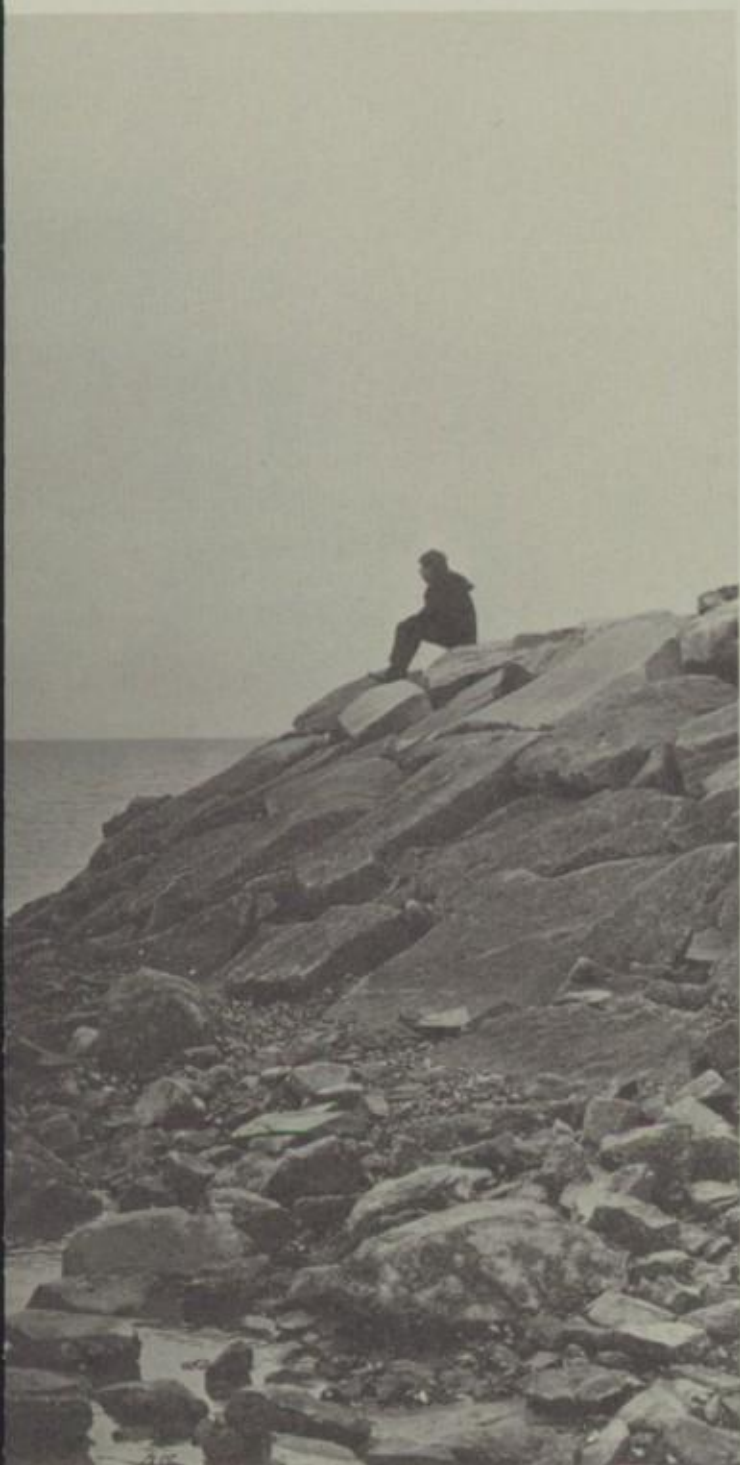

Each high school senior is an individual with his own pool of reflections and memories. Society, however, tends to push the man into the group and pour the pool into the sea—

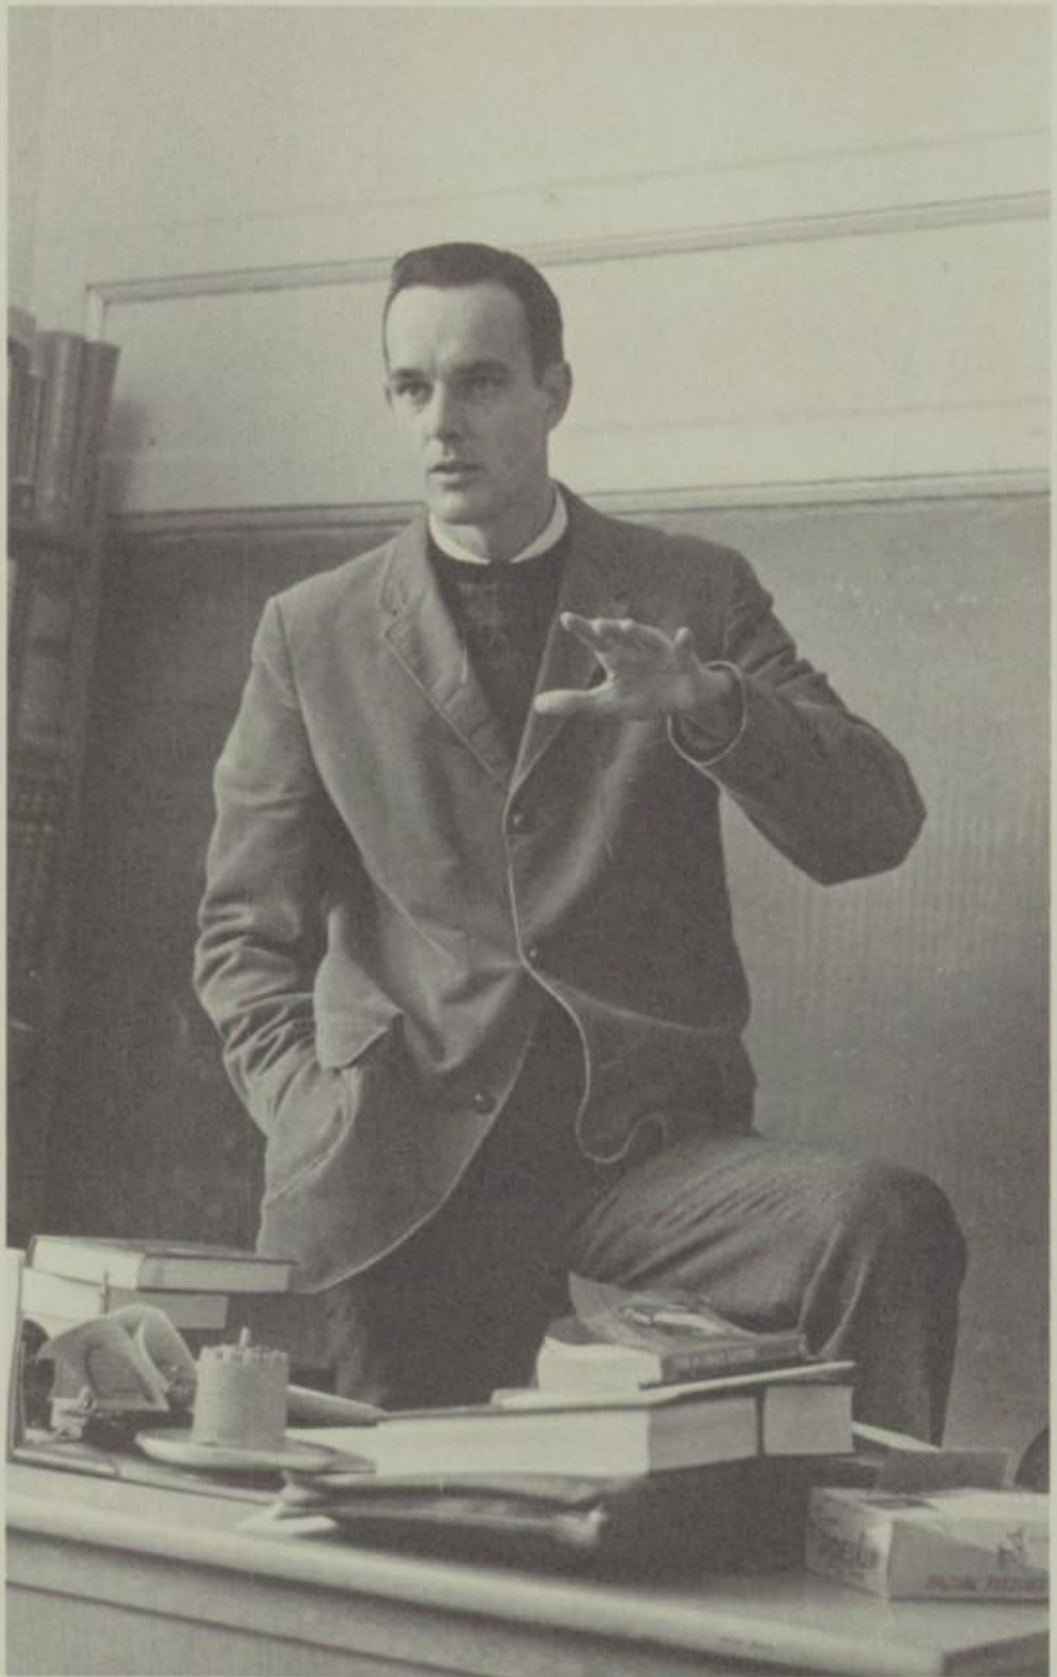

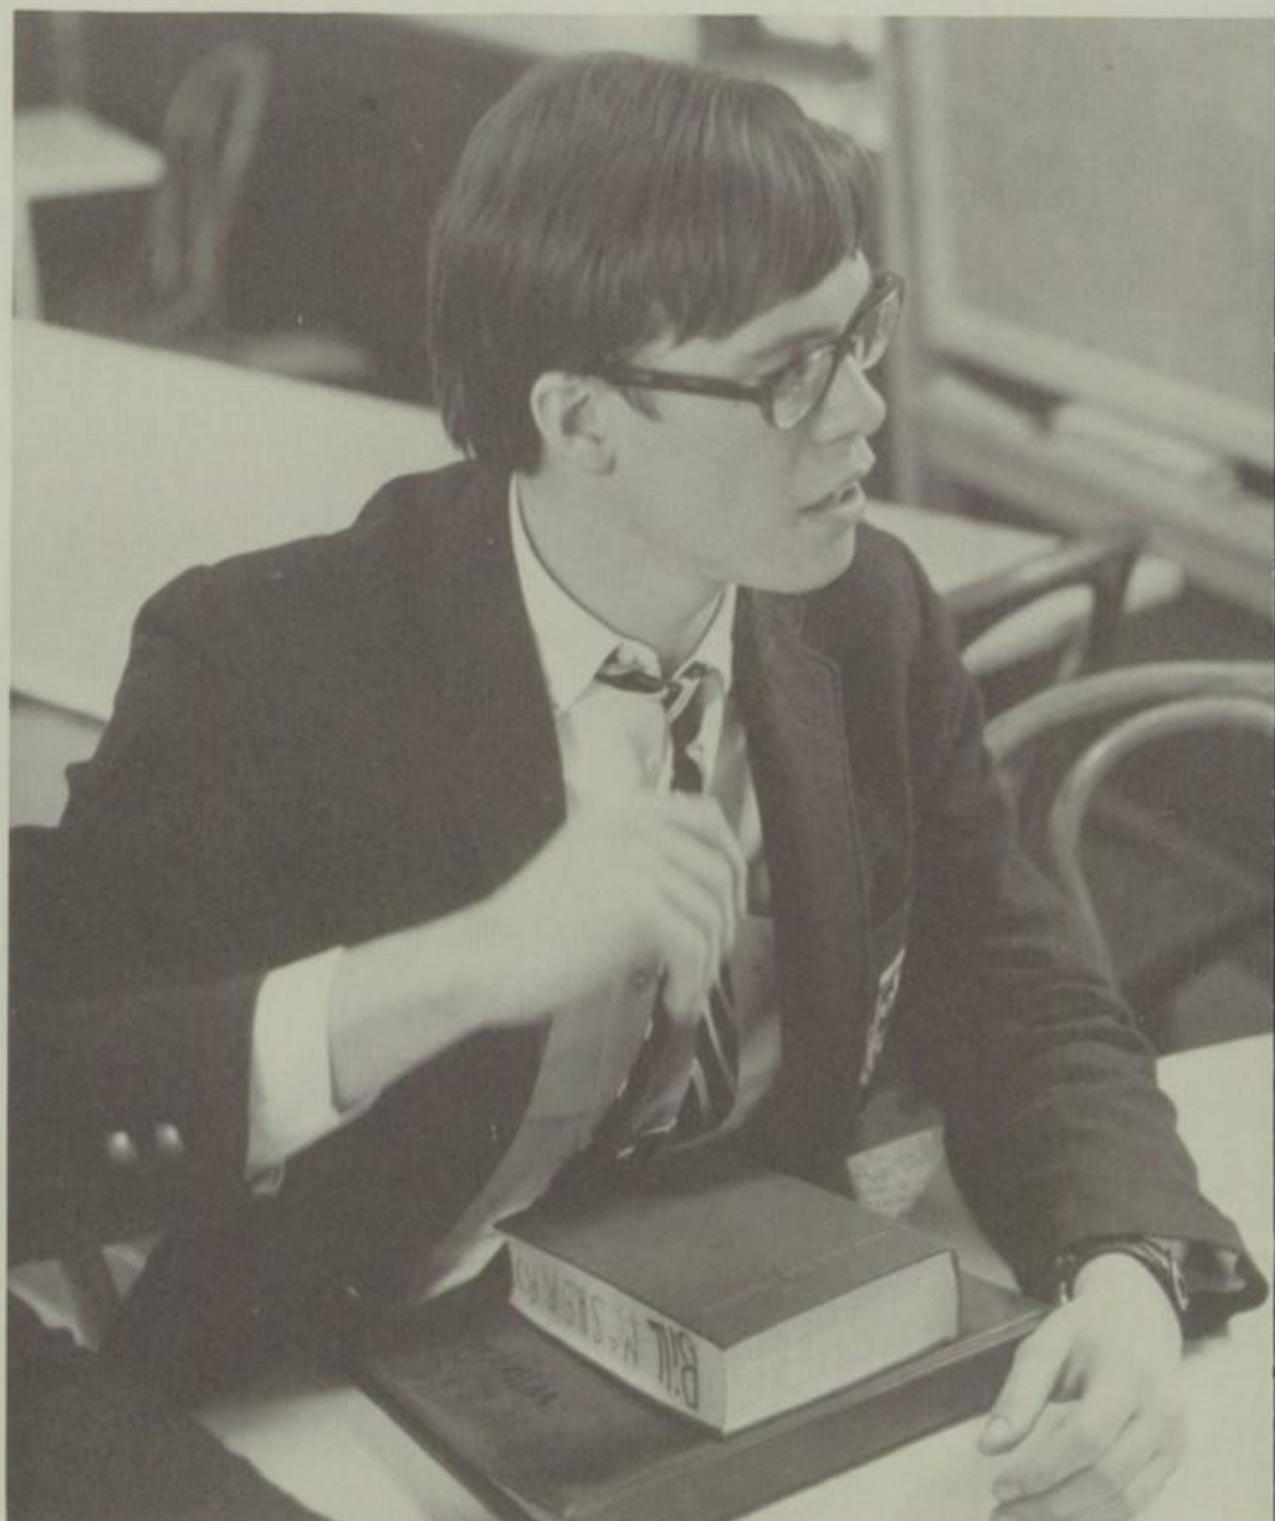

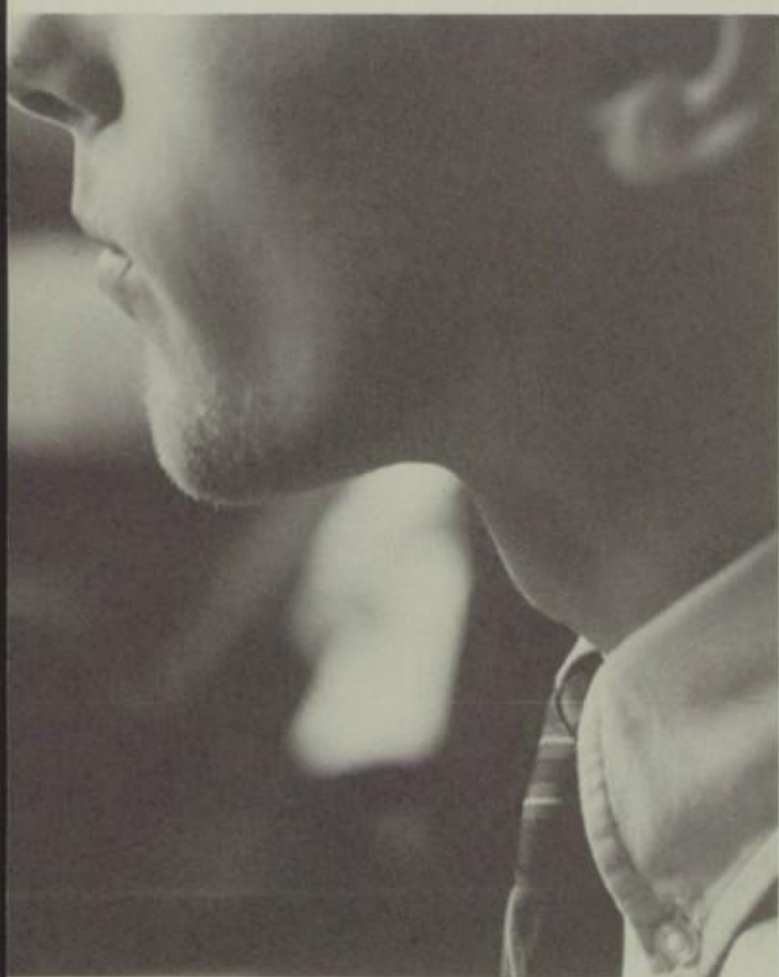

The sea,

a large body of common experiences and cliches, summoned from the equivocal passages of time and experience.

Memories can be captured with the written word or through the lens of a camera. Through the years words often change or lose their meaning. Photographs, however, seem to age well. The wrinkles of time and prejudice do not scar the complexion of the frozen image.

Dedication

The red Volkswagen came to a halt at the end of the parking lot. From the depths of a pile of sports equipment and books the driver emerged. As he started up the hill he was joined by several boys. Spontaneously, a conversation started. His eyes sparkled from a warm, friendly face as his tongue leapt from subject to subject. He also listened intently, for he was interested in everything anyone said. The conversation wandered from skiing to scuba-diving to soccer.

As the impromptu group passed through the front door, the man headed towards the office, the students towards the locker room. But he would see them later in math class, and there he would be able to teach them, for he knew them well. He was a friend, a soccer coach, and a teacher to many of the members of the Class of 1968.

It is with great humility that we dedicate the 1968 Caduceus to Mr. Robert E. Beck.

James P. Jacob

Headmaster

Dear Boys of the Class of 1968:

Congratulations. You have completed the tasks and requirements of your formal education. You are high school graduates. This prompts me to address a few final remarks to you before you slip away from St. Luke's School for good.

A fact of life which all of you have experienced is conflict with your elders. Young people rebel against the restraints of the older generation. They have always done so. The conflict between the generations is, within limits, a healthy process. It helps the young to grow, and it plays an important part in keeping us old folks on our toes.

Today youthful rebellion often exceeds the limits which should serve to keep it sane. It runs beyond the means of either adults or children to retrieve and control it. Moreover, it is grossly magnified by a deep restlessness that is stirring in the hearts of multitudes of people everywhere.

A great thinker of modern times said this. "Rebellion reveals the part of man which must always be defended—humanity's gradually emerging self-awareness." This is a true statement and one that people ought to understand. For you who do understand and are impatient to get on with the revelation, I point to the word gradually. Not only is humanity's emerging self-awareness a gradual process, so is yours. It can't be rushed.

It can, however, be destroyed.

Now that you are about to have more freedom, at least for a few years, than you have ever had before, I hope that you will give deep, in fact prayerful, attention to what it is in yourself and in your neighbors that must always be defended. What is self-awareness? Is it emerging? Are you defending it?

I hope also that the true nature of rebellion will become clear to you. It is central to life itself, and yet it is a power which, unrestrained, is quite capable of destroying the very humanity in which it dwells.

Dear Men of 1968,

As you leave the security and protective atmosphere of your homes, families, and St. Luke's to venture into the world of colleges, universities, and careers, you need more than knowledge and facts to be successful; you need such character traits as courage, perseverance, and will power.

Certainly one of the most dynamic and sustaining forces within man is the will. With it, man achieves that which it would be utterly impossible to achieve otherwise; he rises above himself and is freed from the buffetings of every philosophy and fad, freed from the deteriorations of a life of indecision. Without will power man collapses like a spineless jellyfish and becomes a mass of humanity lacking the basic force and drive essential to organized existence. The human will, fortified by God, becomes a power in the life that no enemy can overcome. The difference between David and Goliath was more than size; it was divinely fortified will power. And in this category David, though young, was the giant.

Sometime ago, we saw an operation performed on the heart of a man which was so daring in its approach and extensive in its scope that a few years ago it would have been considered an impossibility from the standpoint of the surgeon and hopeless from that of the patient. But, it was successful. The basis of this operation did not just rest on the understanding of anatomy, physiology, and chemistry but on years of courageous, persevering efforts backed by an enormous will to succeed. There was a clear apprehension of the nature of the disease that was being attacked, and finally the technical skill necessary to correlate this knowledge and carry out the procedure to its successful conclusion.

It seems almost old-fashioned to talk about will power in this age of libertinism, of sagging morals, and of the surrender of human nature to the wildest addictions that fasten upon man as parasitical forces of self-destruction. Millions are caught up in the grip of Erasmus' concept of "good living," while struggling in the grip of an innocent moral decay. Multitudes are living a "blind life within the brain," unable to fathom the reasons for their weakness, squandering their life forces through emotional insecurities. The parade of today's addicted human beings from alcoholics to hippies suggest that a large segment of Americans is growing up outside the protective walls of the fortified human will.

Will power is more than determination, more than "making up one's mind," more than a hope, a wish, or an "I would like to" state of mind. It is not stubbornness, fixation of mental images, or positive psychological thinking. Will power is the merging of the human will with the power of God. The dynamic energy that results brings man again and again from the fray of a battle "more than conqueror," radiant, vibrant, a living spectacle, reflecting the presence of God in man's life.

My desire for you is that you attack life's problems with a divinely fortified will, that you stand fearlessly for principle and boldly for truth.

The school literary magazine, the "Scrivener" will be published later in the spring - probably in late April or May. All work must therefore be submitted early in March. Unfortunately, last year the "Scrivener" never went to press, partially because of a lack of publicity and partially because of a lack of interest. However, a number of changes have been made this year to insure its publication.

The "Scrivener" is now a combined senior-junior effort (instead of solely a junior one) and has a vastly augmented staff. The Editor - Sandy Steel, will be aided by Assistant Editor - Ed Sanson, Art Editor - Roger Weinreich, Dan and Managers - Duguid. Also will be six

To involve the students in something worthwhile during X period in the winter months was of prime concern to the St. Luke's administration. The solution - present some classic films to both entertain them and arouse their intellectual curiosity. Two excellent dramas, "The Ox-bow Incident" and "Billy Budd," and a hilarious comedy "The Bitch of St. Trinians", have already shown and were received with enthusiasm. In the opening weeks of school the locker room walls were hidden by inspirational aphorisms. "The three 'ations of football are dedication, determination, and perspiration." With grueling twenty-five lap practices and spirited pep rallies, the Big Red team launched its season. In the team's opener St. Luke's shut out Concordia Prep twenty-two to nothing. As the season wore on precious arms were soon robed in bandages and casts, but the relentless eleven would not yield.

Sandy Steel combined with Bill McSherry's passes to score time after time throughout the season. Despite the injuries, the inexperience, and the lack of depth, Co-captains McSherry and Steel led the team to a record of three wins, three losses, and one tie.

Bandages and casts came off. The walls of the locker room soon were bare. Sometime next September Coach Whitcomb will again get out the scotch tape and poster board. The walls will again say, "It takes a cool head to win a hot game."

Our special thanks go to . . .
David S. Wells of Wells Studio, Westport, who took the Senior portraits.
Chuck Dodd of American Yearbook Company, who helped us with many special aspects of production.
and to our patrons, who helped to pay for 1968 Caduceus.

The individual sees only what his imagination has sketched from the various scenes of school life. A workbook more than a bible, this yearbook is not complete until it is thumbed, dog-eared, and underlined with personal hopes and memories.

Stratoscope II

WE'RE WAY OUT

And you can be too if you choose a career in science—especially with Perkin-Elmer. Our engineers are given way out problems to solve—and somehow they find a solution. Like lifting 3 tons of optics above the earth's atmosphere to photograph planets and stars. Stratoscope II was their solution to this problem.

If you are having a problem selecting a career—give a thought to science and Perkin-Elmer.
